Supplementary Planning Guidance

February 2008

Policy Note 1

Archaeology and Planning

Schedule:

Sites of Archaeological Interest

Schedule of sites of archaeological interest

February 2008

The Minister for Planning and Environment has an obligation to protect sites, buildings, structures and places that have a special value or importance to the Island, including Jersey's archaeology. In order to protect archaeology in Jersey, it is necessary to identify, define and categorise those parts of the Island where there is known to be, or suspected of being, archaeological interest.

As a result of work undertaken by Jersey Heritage, in consultation with other agencies such as La Societe Jersiaise, over 160 sites of known or potential archaeological interest have been identified and designated by the Minister for Planning and Environment following a period of consultation.

The sites of archaeological interest and their designation is set out in the attached list and described in further detail in the attached schedules.

The Minister will continue to update and amend this list as more information about the Island's archaeological heritage is gained through the planning process.

More information

For more information about these sites please contact Olga Finch, the Curator of Archaeology at Jersey Heritage on 859857.

For more information about the implications of designation, as it affect development proposals; please contact the Planning and Environment Department's Historic Environment Team, on 448410.
