Subject: RE: Woman's Hour interview
Hi [REDACTED]

I just spoke with Woman's Hour. They are very keen to focus on the historic moment of Jersey's first woman chief minister.

They want to ask Kristina about the significance of women in politics and how much it changes politics. They want to ask her what it means for Jersey to have a woman chief minister and how it is for her to be the first woman chief minister.

They said they're interested in this with a view to what's going on in the UK. Obviously Kristina won't want to comment on UK politics but just to alert her they're looking at that.

They're keen on her appointing the first gender-balanced Council of Ministers.

I've mentioned to them that Kristina is keen to stress that it's not just her, and that we also have the first woman chief executive heading the civil service, and that the States Greffier is also a woman.

They're also interested in her policies for women. I told them she is focused on family but they wanted to know any specific policies that focus on women. If there are any she'd like me to highlight to them ahead of the interview, let me know.

They also said they'd like to ask her a little about the differences between Jersey's system and the UK, and to run through some of the different terminology.

Hi [REDACTED]

Here's the zoom link for the Woman's Hour interview: [REDACTED]
It'll be with [REDACTED].

They're also asking how much time they have for the interview. Could you let me know so I can pass it on?

Thanks,
