How does it work?

JDAP has eight modules. A probation officer will meet with the client to assess risk and will formulate an individualised plan, identifying which modules of the programme are required.

Due to the individual nature of the programme, the number of modules to be completed will depend on the individual's personal circumstances.

The JDAP modules are delivered by probation staff, however, you do not have to be subject to criminal proceedings or probation supervision in order to take part.

Jersey Domestic Abuse Programme (JDAP)

What is the Jersey Domestic Abuse Programme?

JDAP is a domestic abuse programme delivered by the Jersey Probation and After-Care Service. It is for any adult who has behaved abusively towards their current or previous partner(s) who wants to change their behaviour.

JDAP works by focusing on strengths and providing individual skills to use so that clients are better placed to make positive choices within intimate relationships and keep everyone safe.

If I'm assessed as suitable, what will the module work be like?

The compulsory modules cover motivation and relationship skills. Additional modules cover areas such as anger, trauma or children and parenting.

The modules are designed to be delivered on a one-to-one basis with a programme worker. However, the core modules can also be delivered within a small group setting. This allows those with different learning styles to benefit from the programme, and also to learn from one another's experiences. All group participants will agree a contract of confidentiality.

Partners and Families

In order to participate on the programme you will be asked to provide details of your current partner and if appropriate, former partner(s) and children.

The Probation and After-Care Service will work with Jersey Domestic Abuse Support who are a team of professionals who provide support to those that have experienced intimate partner abuse.

This contact is necessary to ensure that all parties, including the client, are effectively supported and safeguarded.

What next?

Referrals to the programme need to be completed by a professional that is working with a client. Please contact the Jersey Probation and After-Care Service for a referral form and guidance notes.

Once a referral has been submitted and accepted, the client will be assigned a probation officer who will make contact to begin the assessment module.

Depending on availability, participants may have to be placed on a waiting list until a place is available.
