Chief Minister, Ministers

Please see below key lines, agreed with ACM Ozouf and JFL, as to what should be stated in respect of BREXIT impact on financial services. ACM Ozouf will use these at lunchtime in his media slots and the CM could also use these in the 'Hot Seat' at 12 noon. We consider these lines should suffice until after the weekend unless you are further advised.

Dear Philip, Geoff and Richard

Post our conference call, [REDACTED] has put the below together which we all consider represents the key messages Philip should look to deliver during his media slots concerning the FS industry.

Please do let us know any comments but we hope all is covered or Philip has enough to rework. Please let us know if we can assist further.

Media response line in respect of a BREXIT vote for financial services in Jersey

i) Jersey has a diversified financial services base

Jersey is today well placed and well planned for a UK BREXIT vote. This is a result of long term strategic planning in respect of the economy and short term planning in respect of the EU Referendum. It is important to remember that Jersey is an International Finance Centre and facilitates the international flow of funds globally. Our diverse base of underlying business is therefore not necessarily directly affected by a BREXIT vote.

In the financial services industry, work in recent years has demonstrated the diversified client base in financial services markets, it is in particular to note new markets in the Middle East, Africa and Asia. These are significant jurisdictions that support the financial services industry in Jersey.

We are very well and uniquely placed to navigate our way through what is going to be a period of adjustment for the UK where there will be the need to build and develop new relationships.

ii) Jersey was a third country to Europe, for financial services, and will remain a third country post BREXIT

Institutional investors place confidence in Jersey structures to distribute capital around the world. Jersey, has always been a third country to Europe for the purposes of financial services and this will remain post the withdrawal of the UK from Europe.

Jersey agreements as to market access for financial services have been built up over numerous years and those agreements will remain post-BREXIT.

The UK will now have to look at alternative models to distribute capital around the world, through new agreements and relationships with other countries, which is, of course, a position that Jersey already has in respect of third country access.

The fact that we already have third country access to Europe allows certainty to be provided through Jersey - that position is the same this morning s it was yesterday morning . Certainty is a very valuable commodity.

The Government see a business as usual relationship with Europe in financial services due to the market access that Jersey has had for years.

[REDACTED]

Art

The markets this morning has demonstrated the volatility that was predicted would come about as a result of a BREXIT vote. However, we have already seen the markets beginning to stabilise over the course of the morning and the announcement by Prime Minister that the withdrawal of the UK from the EU will have to come about under a new Prime Minister will provide a likely 3 month break in which stability may return to the UK market. Over time history tells us markets tend to rebalance.

The Bank of England Governor has issued a statement this morning on stability of the UK economy and liquidity of UK banks. Jersey is a significant contributor to liquidity as explained in the Capital Economics Report on Jersey's value to the UK. [REDACTED]

Art

Jersey's financial services industry has adapted to significant changed over recent years. After having been through the worst financial crisis since the second world war we have shown we are resilient. We are adaptable and we are in a good position as to change. We have returned to almost record numbers in employment and we have diversified and changed before.

The Jersey authorities will work closely with the financial services industry to ensure Jersey is as well placed as it can be to retain a positive relationship with the City of London in the event of a BREXIT.

Dear Philip,

Joe, [REDACTED] and I have been working with External Relations and [REDACTED] on media lines concerning financial services in the event of a BREXIT vote. The below is our advice to you in that respect.

As you are due to speak on the economy after the vote, [REDACTED] would like you to sign off these lines before they go to other Ministers in a cumulative document. Could you therefore have a look at them ASAP?

[REDACTED]

Art 35

[REDACTED]

Three areas for comment:

- i) Jersey has a diversified financial services base
 - A BREXIT vote is not the be all and end all for the financial services industry in Jersey. Whilst the industry has grown up with close links to the City of London, and maintains those close links, in more recent years the industry has seen increasing diversification in its market activity. This is demonstrated by the more recent business figures from Europe (excluding the UK), the GCC, Africa, India and Asia. This diverse base of underlying business is therefore not necessarily directly affected by a BREXIT vote.
- ii) Jersey was a third country to Europe, for financial services, and will remain a third country post BREXIT
 - Jersey, had always been a third country to Europe for the purposes of financial services. Agreements as to market access have been built up in this environment and those agreements would remain post-BREXIT. On this basis, the financial services industry would not experience significant change in accessing European markets post BREXIT.

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

Art 41

Jersey's financial services industry is heavily linked to the City of London, and therefore, it has previously been said "What is bad for the City, is bad for Jersey". [REDACTED]. There have been economic predictions that the City, after a short term economic shock, may then experience a period of growth in the medium to long term, depending on the UK exit negotiations. This could again, have an effect upon Jersey.

The Jersey authorities will work closely with the financial services industry to ensure Jersey is as well placed as it can be to retain a positive relationship with the City of London in the event of a BREXIT.

I understand you are speaking with Joe at 5pm who is fully briefed and in agreement with this approach and maybe you could discuss any issues at that point? [REDACTED] and I are also available should you need us.

Kind regards,

Morning Steve,

Dealing with the dairy industry on delicate and sensitive matters is business as usual for me and what I'm paid for. I'm also charged with managing the risks of Brexit on behalf of Environment. That said I really appreciate and welcome the political air cover and the good intent Steve - thank you.

You raise many hugely relevant questions. Rather than attempt to ask Dan to answer them all, maybe an informal meeting in the next few weeks would be a good idea.

Please find attached the Govt public lines that the Chief Minister, Senator Bailhache and Senator Ozouf will be speaking from today. The Chief Minister requested yesterday at CoM that only those three Ministers speak to the media today. There will be plenty of time next week and beyond for other Ministers to speak on their respective subjects with guidance from officers here and in respective departments. Grateful if you could reiterate this message from the CM to your Ministers today.

I'll also forward on other relevant documents after this email

Subject: Brexit

Dear Alan

Would you be able to give me a call to discuss the following matters following last night's referendum result?

- Potential impact on interest rates

Interest rates are at record lows already and the Bank of England have made a statement saying that it will consider over the coming weeks any additional policy responses. This would include whether to cut interest rates. From a Jersey perspective, Our forecasts already plan for a longer period of low interest rates

- The effect on borrowing costs for the new hospital and for ordinary Islanders

The States existing borrowing costs are not impacted.

Please see above, there is uncertainty, however some Islanders will have fixed rate borrowings, for others, the current view of protracted low interest rates has not changed, but it is difficult to predict forward given the current volatility in markets. We will obviously be monitoring the position with keen interest.

It is too early to say what the impacts on borrowing costs for a new hospital going forward. We should continue to plan for the new hospital and continue to look at the options.

- How Jersey's S&P rating might be affected.

Lines previously circulated

- George Osborne's 'emergency budget'. Can Jersey expect something similar?

We are definitely not planning an emergency budget. This is not the time for knee jerk reactions. The M|TFP will be lodged next Thursday.

Best regards,

Ian

Okay, so as you know, I've been talking to the JEP about the possibility that they'd do a night shift on Thursday to cover the Brexit results. The upshot is that they're "99.9% certain" that they won't and that they'll just leave the coverage for Saturday. They're playing the odds, basically.

See below for the arrangement that I've made with them in terms of access to gov. It'll all come through me anyway but just to let you know what to expect.

Ian Heath has already been fully briefed by us (David W and I, that is) and has a ~~reasonable grasp of the issues~~ -

Cheers,

Dear Richard and Geoff,

Philip wants to send out a blogpost for his website adapted from the Brexit lines that came through this morning. I'm attaching it and he wants it on his website by 5pm - are there any changes you would like before he posts it?

Best,

Sir Philip,

I've just been clearing emails having been working on the report and have seen your email - the substance of which we went through yesterday morning. I hope that the Report as it ended up by the 2 pm meeting, and then by 5 pm hits the mark.

Kind regards,

David
