Your comments: While I agree with demolishing the existing holiday camp buildings, I am firmly opposed to anything being put back there in bricks and mortar. I entirely agree with the National Trust that the headland should be preserved forever for future generations. Already so many parts of our coast has been vandalised by allowing inappropriate buildings (Portelet Bay being the latest in a long list), I just hope that for once the people of this Island will be listened to and that planning permission for the building of 28 houses will be rejected. Apart from houses, please bear in mind the increased traffic through tiny lanes, humans and pets all over the headland and no doubt in future people wanting to add further structures on existing ones - all this on a natural beautiful part of Jersey which must not be further destroyed but returned to nature.
